PREFACE.

THE growth in popularity of such a work as the "Annual Index to Periodicals," the seventh volume of which is now presented to the public, rather resembles the growth of an oak-tree than that of Jonah's gourd. The gourd sprang up in a night and withered before noon, whereas the oak in its seventh year has only begun to strike its deep root into the earth, and spread its branches abroad in the sight of men.

It requires time for the full utility of the Index to the Periodical Literature of the English-speaking world to be realised, but as year follows year there is a steady and regular increase in the appreciation of its usefulness. No one who has ever used it for practical purposes can ever feel that he can dispense with so necessary a guide to the periodical expression of contemporary thought. And so the hope grows that in time the Index may even become self-supporting.

In the present volume of the Index, articles in foreign languages may be said to appear for the first time. In previous years there has been an occasional article in French in the New Review; but the year 1896 was marked by the publication in London of a review with distinct sections in English, French, and German in each number, and all the articles in Cosmopolis are included in the Index. The most extensive and tedious topics to deal with in 1896, from the indexing point of view, seem to have been South Africa, and the United States Presidential Campaign with its Free Silver and other issues; Venezuela, Cuba, and Armenia have continued to make a heavy demand on space in 1896; the Education Bill and the question of Anglican Orders are also among the much discussed topics of the year; Mr. Balfour's "Foundations of Belief," and Mr. Lecky's "Democracy and Liberty" have still been favourite subjects of criticism; recent books have renewed the interest in Bishop Butler, Matthew Arnold, Cardinal Manning, and others; and death has brought to special notice the lives and work of such men as Lord Leighton and William Morris.

Next year we may, of course, expect that the Annual Index will bear ample traces of the Diamond Jubilee celebration, as the periodicals are full of reviews of the Queen's reign from every possible standpoint.

It should scarcely be necessary to call attention once more to the value of indexes, yet some quite important books, bristling with allusions to persons and historical events, have recently been issued without any indexes to their contents. The Memoirs of Cardinal de Retz, the Paget Papers, Sir Mountstuart E. Grant Duff's book on Renan, Miss Frances Power Cobbe's Autobiography, may be cited as conspicuous instances of this indifference to a very essential detail in book-production. But such sins of omission are no longer passed over in silence, and it is gratifying to note that there has been of late a growing appreciation of the doctrine urged by the more enlightened, that copyright should be refused to any book that is published without an adequate Index.

The whole question of bibliography is likely to be brought prominently to the front again by the meeting of the Second International Library Conference at the Guildhall next month. To refer to all the contributions made to bibliography during the past year would be somewhat out of place here. To compile a list of them is much more the work of a general literary year-book, but a complete catalogue of bibliographies now in existence would serve to show a considerable duplication of work. The Library Associations naturally desire that there should be no such waste of effort. Add to the list of bibliographies made a list of the various bibliographical proposals mooted and discussed during the year, and we see at once what an advance in the department of bibliography has been made of recent years. Not the least striking instance of this progress is supplied by Mr. Gladstone in his recent edition of Bishop Butler's Works. He was of opinion that Butler had suffered in the hands of students owing to the difficulty, for want of Index, of referring from one part to another of the Works. He has, therefore, not only broken up the text into sections, each supplied with a cross-heading to assist the eye and the mind of the reader, but he has had the happy thought to assist imperfect memory by adding Indexes. To his own question, What is the proper basis of an index? he thus makes answer in the Preface to the "Analogy":—

> Not to present an exhaustive analysis, but rather to supply an aid to the memory of the student. The student ought to find in the several items of an index, under the most natural and (so to speak) salient heads, every point of his author's text to which it is likely that, in default of exact recollection; he may desire to refer.

And it is in accordance with a similar idea that these Annual Indexes to Periodicals have been constructed.

If the necessity of indexes to books, which, after all, are for the most part confined to a single subject, or group of subjects, be thus recognised, how much more essential must be a convenient key to the miscellaneous mass of encyclopædic information, observation, reflection, and criticism, which appears periodically in the English language in all parts of the world! Every one of these articles, however slight and meagre, represents to some extent the result of human thought and the accumulated record of human experience; and for lack of some such comprehensive "Baedeker" to the vast and unmapped realm of periodical literature, who can estimate how much honest toil has been wasted, how laboriously many a student, journalist, or inventor has hewn out for himself a new path through the jungle, while here, ready to hand, lay a well-trodden road, which he could have traversed had he known where to find it?

The principles on which this Index have been constructed, frequently as they have been stated, may be explained once more for the sake of those who make acquaintance with the series for the first time. The work is no mere mechanical production, based simply on the idea of indexing everything exactly as it appears, that is, according to the title which the fancy of the author, or, it may be, the caprice of the editor, may have chosen to affix. Due note is taken of original titles, but the majority need to be amended or explained in some way or other. The Index is the result of the application of the mind of an expert to the task of selecting, explaining, and classifying under appropriate headings and sub-headings those articles which have been given to the periodical press in the course of the past year. There is no lack of idiosyncrasy, of originality, or of independent judgment in the arrangement of this Index, and to Miss Hetherington and her colleagues, whose work it is my privilege to publish, I may apply the familiar and oft-quoted remark of Opie, who, when asked by some presumptuous amateur how he mixed his colours, replied: "With brains, Sir."

INTRODUCTION.

THE PERIODICALS, 1896—7.

In the world of periodicals there is not much of special interest in the way of changes and developments to chronicle in 1896-7. Taking the deaths first, we note the disappearance after 1895 of Asclepiad, a quarterly medical magazine, edited and written by the late Sir Benjamin Ward Richardson. In 1896, the New Science Review (an American quarterly), the Minster, the Religious Review of Reviews, and the Review of the Churches were the first to go. The Country House has not been obtainable since July; but the Medical Magazine, which we supposed to have been discontinued, has reappeared in May, 1897, with its price reduced to 1s. nett. The Crown, a light illustrated monthly, has not been heard of since the first few numbers were issued.

The most important of the new periodicals of 1896 is Cosmopolis, with separate English, French, and German sections, under the general editorship of Mr. F. Ortmans. At the same time, Pearson's Magazine, a light illustrated periodical, and To-Morrow, of more serious import, came into existence. These were all born in January, and were referred to in last year's issue of the "Annual Index." In the autumn there were several new periodicals. The Progressive Review, which had long been promised, came out in October, with Mr. J. A. Hobson and Mr. William Clarke as editors. As its name indicates, it professes to be a review of progressive thought. The same month we had Mr. S. K. Hocking's Temple Magazine, a bright semi-religious magazine; and in November the Lady's Realm, an excellent illustrated monthly, edited by Mr. W. H. Wilkins. Three threepenny magazines should not be overlooked. First in point of date were the Avenue and the Commonwealth, both born in January. The Avenue is devoted to co-operation and kindred topics, and the Commonwealth is a social magazine, edited by Canon Scott Holland. The Osborne did not appear till October, and it was discontinued in May of the present year. The Indian Fencing Review, a quarterly from India, was started in July, and the International, an illustrated magazine of articles and stories translated from foreign languages, was started at Chicago in August.

A few minor changes in the latter part of 1896 remain to be mentioned. In September, Mr. Lloyd Bryce resigned all connection with the North American Review, and the famous American monthly passed into other hands, Mr. David A. Munro being the present editor. Report has it that the review was sold for 140,000 dollars (£28,000), and that this price was based on receipts. Mr. A. E. Keet, who succeeded Mr. W. H. Page as editor of the Forum, has resigned, and Dr. J. M. Rice reigns in his stead. In October, Science Progress and Poet Lore became quarterlies. Atalanta has again changed hands, and is edited by Mr. Edwin Oliver, while Cassell's Family Magazine has Mr. Max Pemberton as its new editor. The Pall Mall Magazine, which was produced at a shilling, then rose to eighteenpence, has been issued at 1s. nett since September last. The price of To-Morrow was raised from fourpence to sixpence in July. Dr. Joseph Cook's Our Day, which changed its name under its new owner, first to Our Day and Altruistic Review, then to Altruistic Review, next to Pulpit Herald and Altruistic Review, has changed hands once more, and is now known as the Twentieth Century Monthly. The new Our Day, started at Chicago in February, 1896, is still continued.

It is impossible to pass over entirely such changes as have already taken place in 1897, though they do not strictly belong to a survey understood to deal with 1896 only. Of the new magazines, the New Century Review, published at 6d. nett, was the first to come into the field. The Aeronautical Journal, the quarterly organ of the Aeronautical Society of Great Britain, also dates from January. The next in order of time is the Reformer, a threepenny monthly on lines similar to those followed by the late National Reformer. In April, we have the Land Magazine, a shilling monthly conducted by the editor of the Land Agents' Record. The topics discussed in it are the various agricultural and land questions. The Journal of Finance, which was started in 1895 as a weekly, suddenly became a half-crown monthly in May. It is edited by Mr. S. F. Van Oss, a well-known writer on finance. The same month has given us the Genealogical Magazine, a shilling monthly described as a "a journal of Family History, Heraldry, and Pedigrees." It promises to be Family History, made both accurate and interesting. The Comet, "a magazine of free opinion," edited by Mr. John Brayne, came out in May. It is a shilling magazine, to be issued at irregular intervals. With the June number, the Metaphysical Magazine has been transformed into Intelligence. The Anti-Philistine, a sort of London Chap-Book, appeared in June; and the Victorian, a fourpenny monthly, and the Naval and Military Magazine have also been announced.

Every month brings us some magazine changes to take note of—new editors, new addresses, new prices, etc. One of the first changes of the present year was in the editorship of the Arena, and Mr. B. O. Flower has been succeeded by Dr. John Clark Ridpath. Since March, Lend a Hand is incorporated with the Charities Review of New York. The English price of the Cosmopolitan has been reduced from 7½d. to 6d. nett. The Catholic Month has been transferred to Messrs. Longman, Green and Co., who publish it at a shilling. The American New Christian Quarterly has gone into new hands. In April, the Free Review enlarged its name to University Magazine and Free Review, and "Democritus" is the present editor, and the University Press, Limited, the publisher.

In the domain of art, which has purposely not been referred to above that the developments in in 1896 and 1897 might be dealt with together, there has been a decided advance. The Magazine of Art, which is again enlarged, has always been up to date, and additional pages have frequently been inserted to enable the editor to deal more adequately with some important topic of the moment. The most important feature in connection with the Art Journal is the publication of extra numbers at Easter and at Christmas, devoted to the life and work of some prominent artist. The Studio, which continues as good as ever, published an excellent winter number in 1896; and the Artist, the contents of which are now included in the Annual Index, has distinguished itself in 1896 by the issue of two interesting extra numbers, one dealing with the Arts and Crafts Exhibition, and the other with the work of Mr. Frederick Sandys.

For some time the Architectural Record of New York had no rivals, so far as quarterly or monthly illustrated periodicals devoted to architecture are concerned. In 1896, however, two architectural monthlies were brought out in London. The month of February gave us Architecture, an interesting and beautifully illustrated magazine, published at 1s. nett. In November, this magazine found a sixpenny competitor in the Architectural Review, also profusely illustrated. Both magazines are good, and those who cannot afford a shilling for the one will get a very good sixpennyworth in the other. In March, 1897, the first number of the House, an illustrated magazine, treating of house-decoration in all its branches, was published.

Some illustrated quarterly publications, which can scarcely be looked upon as magazines proper, call for a word of remark. The Yellow Book continues, but the Savoy, which issued two quarterly numbers in January and April, 1896, and became a monthly in July, was discontinued in December. The Evergreen, which gave us spring and autumn numbers in 1895, has completed its series with summer and winter numbers in 1896. The artistic Quarto appeared twice in 1896; and on Lady Day, 1897, the Dome was produced as "a (shilling) quarterly, containing examples of all the arts."

The music magazines seem to have more ups and downs than any other class of journals. The Musical Times has (in 1897) a new editor in Mr. F. G. Edwards. The Magazine of Music has become a weekly in 1897. Melody was founded in March, 1896; and the New Quarterly Musical Review ceased to appear in May, 1896. The most important new development in musical literature is the publication in May, 1897, of a sixpenny weekly entitled the Musician.

Of the new German periodicals to hand, the most artistic is the Zeitschrift für Bücherfreunde, at 2 Marks, started by Herrn Velhagen and Klasing in April, 1897. It is an illustrated monthly, which will appeal to all who are interested in books and can make their way through the German letterpress. The Monatsschrift für Neue Litteratur und Kunst appeared in October, 1896; Neuland in April, 1897.

From Paris we have the Revue de l'Art Ancien et Moderne in April, 1897. It is a handsome art magazine, beautifully illustrated, and is edited by M. Jules Comte; the price is 7 francs 50 centimes per number. Another French review hails from Edinburgh—the Revue Française d'Edimbourg. It comes out every two months, and the price is 1s. The editor is Dr. Charles Sarolea, and the first number is dated January of the present year. The Revue des Revues has become quite an excellent independent review, with a number of original articles, but it continues to give lengthy summaries of articles from other reviews. The Bibliothèque Universelle, which has entered on its hundred-and-second year, remains, next to the Gentleman's Magazine, the most venerable periodical. The Société Nouvelle has become Humanité Nouvelle; the Magazine International, a magazine of translations into French from other languages, has been discontinued; the Revue des Femmes Russes et des Femmes Françaises was started in 1896; and the Questions Diplomatiques et Coloniales, a fortnightly, appeared in March, 1897, and was entitled originally the Revue Diplomatique et Coloniale. Most of the French periodicals dispense with illustrations, but the Revue Encyclopédique, which became a weekly in 1896, and the Monde Moderne, remain the exceptions, and are exceedingly well illustrated. The Revue des Revues should also be numbered among the French illustrated periodicals. Bessarione, started at Rome in 1896, is a Catholic and ecclesiastical magazine, promoting the union of the Greek and Latin Churches.

An interesting book might be written on the history of periodicals, and quite a voluminous bibliography of literature on the subject might be compiled. In April last year the Dublin Review celebrated its diamond jubilee. Mr. James Payn took leave of the Cornhill Magazine in the June number of the magazine, and in July Mrs. Anne Thackeray Ritchie gave some reminiscences of the first number of Cornhill. Mr. G. W. Niven contributed an article to the Scots Magazine of February on the Scots Magazine, 1739—1826. Hidden away in this article are some interesting bits about Blackwood's Magazine in its early days. The New Ireland Review of July contained an article by Mr. T. A. Sillard on Dr. Maginn and Fraser's Magazine; Atalanta of February reprinted, with slight alterations, an article by Mr. George Morley on the Magazines of 1839—1840, first published in the Sun (magazine) in February, 1891; and the Ludgate of October had an article on Regimental Journals, by Mr. Walter Wood.

INDEXES, ETC.

THERE are many more points in regard to periodicals which it would be interesting to discuss, but some space is due to the indexes issued in connection with periodical literature. Besides the American "Annual Literary Index," there is the "Cumulative Index to a Selected List of Periodicals," started in 1896 by the Public Library, Cleveland, Ohio. Over fifty periodicals were to be indexed, and the index was to be issued monthly, each successive number, as its name implies, being cumulative and including all previous entries. The December number was thus to be a complete index to the selected periodicals for 1896, and the annual subscription was to be 5 dollars. Lists of selected articles are given by the Author, the Dial of Chicago, West Ham Library Notes, etc. The Labour Annual, edited by Mr. Joseph Edwards, includes in each of its three issues an index to the principal articles of the year on Labour and Social Reform. Many of the class reviews (mostly quarterlies) give lists of books and articles relating to their special subjects—History, Geography, Political Economy, etc. A list of those which have appeared as special bibliographies in the magazines in 1896 will be found in the Index under the heading "Bibliography." The Engineering Magazine has published two "Engineering Indexes," Vol. II. covering 1892—1895; and the Psychological Review has published some "Psychological Indexes."

The following list, though of necessity incomplete, will give some idea of the general indexes which have been issued to series of periodicals:—

CURRENT HISTORY.

The attempts to compile diaries and registers of current events have not all been successful. Among those which have been discontinued are the "Times (Annual) Register of Events"; the "Annals of Our Time," by Mr. Joseph Irving, from the Accession of the Queen to the Jubilee, 1837—1887 (2 vols.), and carried on by Mr. H. Hamilton Fyfe down to about the end of 1891; and the "Irish Diurnal," a record of Irish affairs, by Mr. W. G. Cox and Mr. J. R. Clegg, which only appeared in 1893. The Times Index, by Mr. Sam. Palmer, now extends back to the 'twenties; and the Times "Annual Summaries" have been reprinted by Messrs. Macmillan in handy form, Vol. I, 1861—1875, and Vol. II., 1876—1892, with Indexes. The "Annual Register" is another review of public events. A new effort in this direction is "Politics in 1896," edited by Mr. F. Whelen.

The monthly Liberal Magazine and the quarterly Current History partake more of the nature of periodicals than any of the publications just named. The Liberal Magazine is a handy compendium of facts, notes, and figures, which must be well known to all members of the Liberal Party, and is no doubt found useful for reference by others of different political persuasion. It was founded in 1893 as a record of events in and out of Parliament which are of interest to the Liberal Party, and it includes a diary of the month, extracts from speeches, epitomes of bills, etc. Each volume is supplied with an index.

From America we have Current History, a sort of quarterly "Progress of the World." It was started at Detroit, Michigan, in 1891, under the editorship of Dr. Alfred S. Johnson, and the first number gave a review of the year 1890. Subsequent quarterly parts continued the history to the end of 1892, when the publication was purchased by Messrs. Garretson, Cox & Co., of Buffalo, New York. Since 1893 the register has appeared regularly as before, always with Dr. Johnson as editor, and the record of events has been brought down to the end of 1896. In other words, six volumes have been completed, covering 1890—1896 (1890 and 1891 formed one volume), each supplied with an index.

Explanation.

The periodicals (quarterlies and monthlies) are indexed from January to December, 1896, irrespective of volumes. As yet no weeklies are included in the scheme.

In addition to the abbreviations of the titles of magazines, note that the number of the volume, the month, and the page of the magazine in which each article will be found are given, while the figures in parentheses refer to the volume, month, and page of the Review of Reviews (London edition) where the article is summarized or otherwise noticed. In case of a series of articles on one subject in one magazine, the name of the magazine is not repeated with each reference, only the month and the page, and the number of the volume where necessary.

Thus U S M, CXXXIV. July, 347 (XIV. July, 68), Aug, 469, Sept, 627; CXXXV. Oct, 65, would read United Service Magazine, Vol. CXXXIV., July, page 347, with a notice in the Review of Reviews (London edition), Vol. XIV., July, page 68; United Service Magazine again, same Volume, August, page 469, September, page 627; Vol. CXXXV., October, page 65.

(Map) means that the article is accompanied by a map, and (ill.) that it is illustrated.

Articles are classified and arranged under subheadings as much as possible, and authors' names, when available, are given. In addition, many authors will find their articles tabulated under their names; unfortunately, owing to the exigencies of space, this has not been possible in every instance. Articles with vague titles are indexed under some word in the title with an explanatory sub-title added; or, a cross-reference is given to show under which heading the article will be found. Occasionally an article appears simultaneously in an English and in an American review, in which case "same article" is stated. Poems are indexed under the authors' names; the same holds good with novelists and most other writers whose books are reviewed in the periodicals.

Critical and biographical notices of artists are given under the names of the artists, of musicians under the musicians names, etc. A list of artists noticed will be found under the heading "Art"; musicians and composers under "Music"; dramatists, playwrights, and actors under "Theatres and the Drama"; novelists under "Fiction"; etc., etc. Dates of births and deaths where readily obtainable have been inserted with the names of persons now dead; but with kings, emperors, etc., the dates of their reigns have usually been preferred. Dates of important events have also been added. Serials and short stories are not indexed, but the chief poems are given.
